

The United States steamship Western Front ablaze off the Scilly Islands, to the south of England. Most of her crew were taken off by the steamer British Earl and afterward landed, but several lives were lost. The blazing ship became almost red hot and efforts to tow her had to be abandoned. A lifeboat with some of the survivors is shown in the foreground.

Central News.

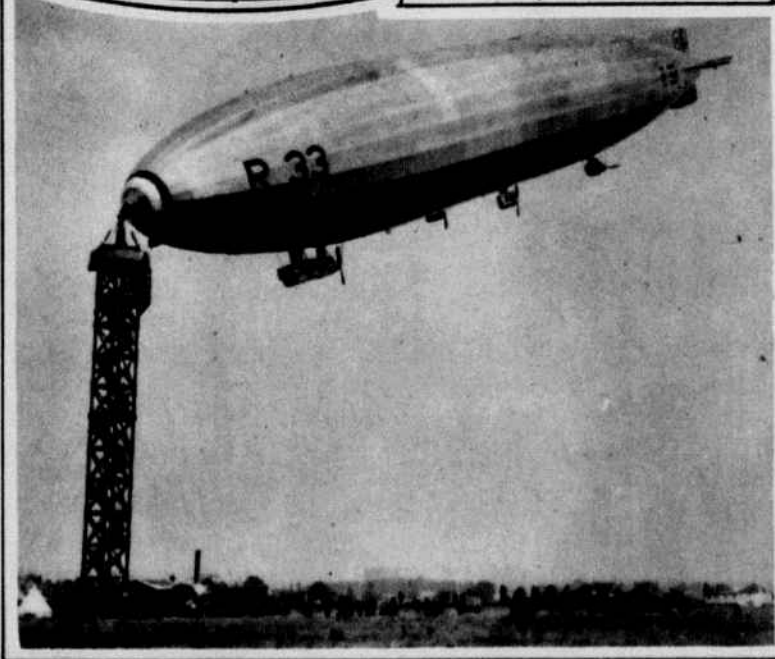

Above — Cardinal Lucan celebrating mass on the steps of Rheims Cathedral on the occasion of the return to its site of the famous statue of Jeanne d'Arc, removed during the Underwood & War.

At left—The restored statue, once more upon its pedestal, in front of the magnificent entrance to the Cathedral of Rheims.

Keystone View Co.

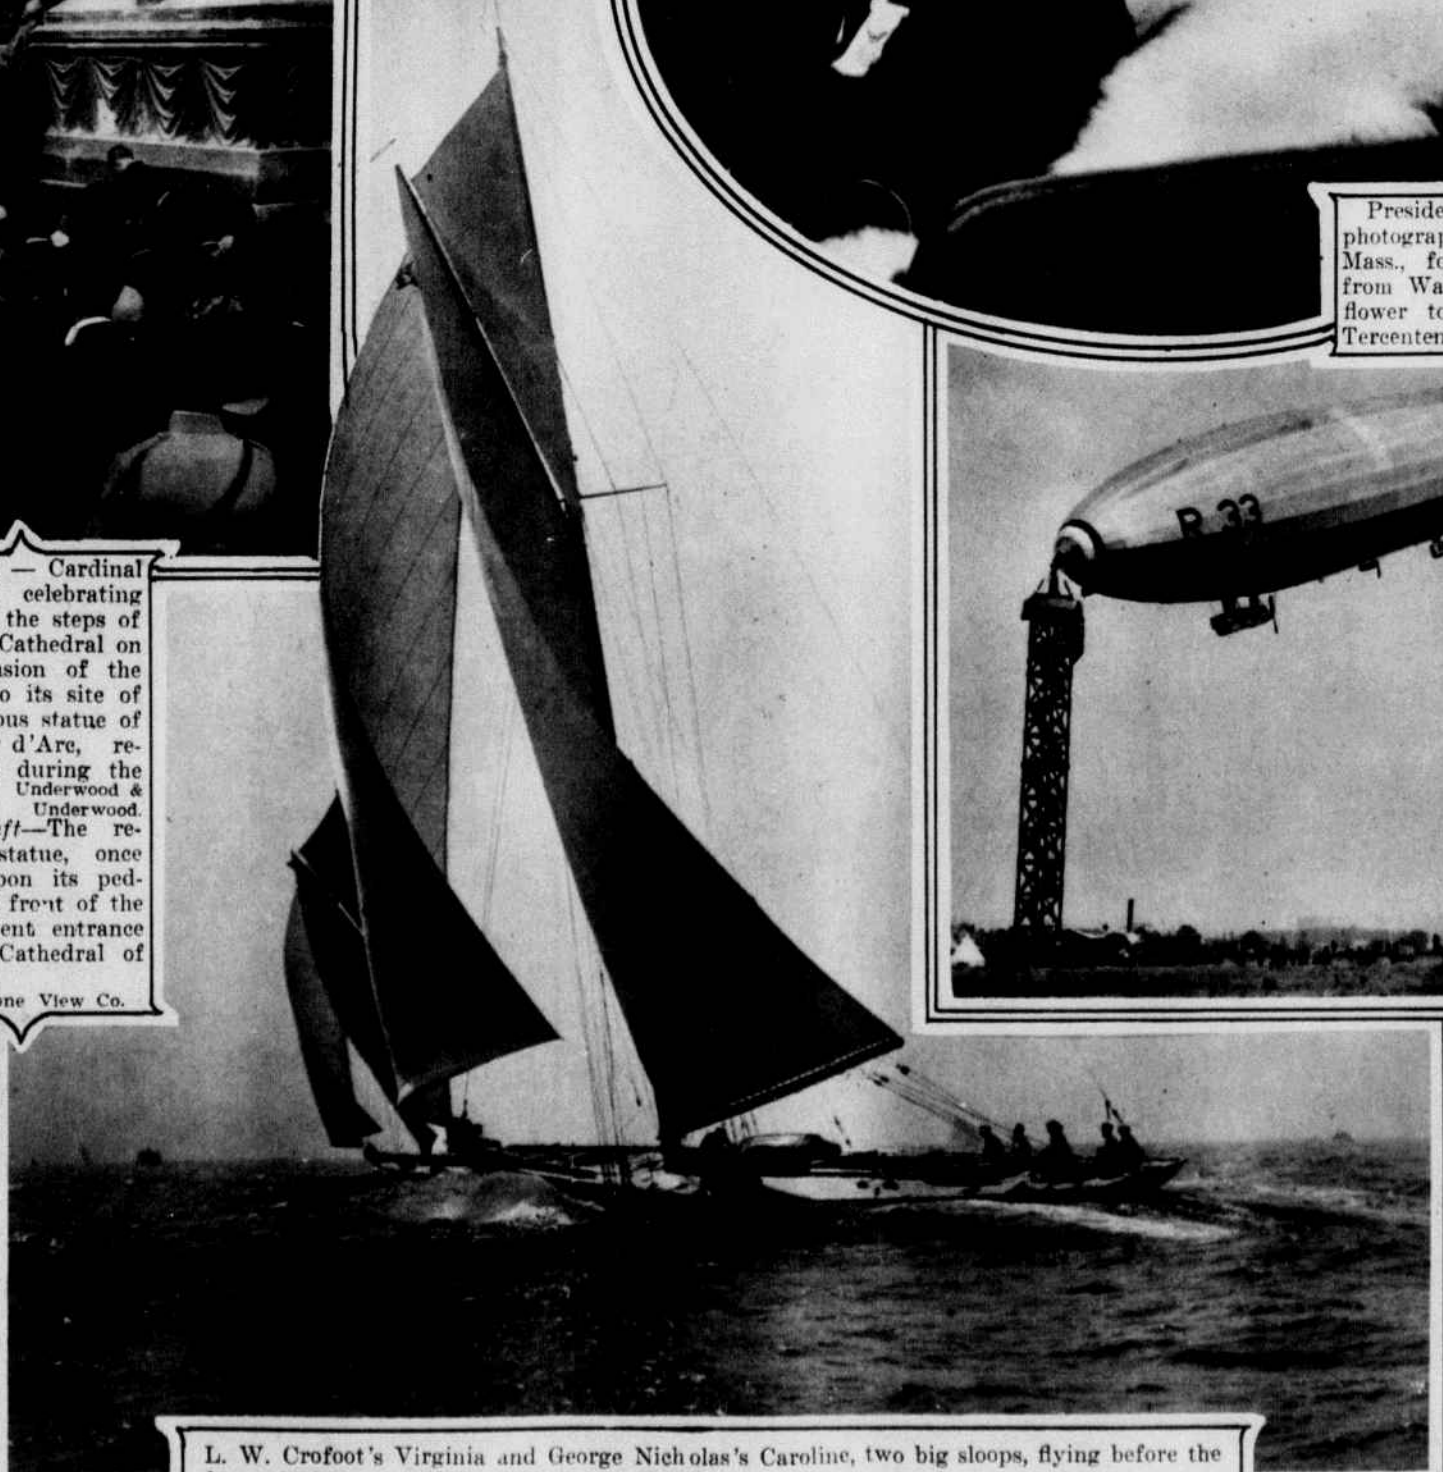

President and Mrs. Harding, photographed at Plymouth, Mass., following their arrival from Washington on the Mayflower to attend the Pilgrim Tercentenary celebration.

Above—One of the newest and largest British dirigibles, anchored to her mooring mast at Croydon, England. The small projection under the ship's nose is the gangplank by which passengers enter when the R-33 is on an even keel.

Underwood & Underwood.

L. W. Crofoot's Virginia and George Nicholas's Caroline, two big sloops, flying before the heavy breeze on the New York Yacht Club's run to New London.

(c) Edwin Levick.

